OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

SATURDAY OCTOBER 96 Unfaithfulness of the South to its Northern

In no way can the election of Lincoln be now prevented but hy frightening the North by pictures of the dreadful things the South will do in such an event. But just as it became apparent that all other means had failed, and when the sheet-iron thunder should have redoubled peal on peal, the South began to let up and to roar gently as | doves at the maternal breast. Now the most fearful fire-eaters in the South are those who proclaim their determination to shoulder muskets and thrust promiscuously into the bowels of those who attempt to resist the inauguration of a Republican President.

This treachery is most unaccountable, It weakens the hands of the Northern national men. Instead of the terrible picture of wholesale ascession, the patriotic journals in the North, like the Cincinnati Enquirer, are reduced to a retail panic-business, about some operator who is going to ship his flour "by the most expeditious route," if Lincoln is elected, or some Southern dealer who has left Cincinnati without purchasing a patent rat-trap, as he would have done but for the complexion of the late elections.

South Carolina, too, has failed us, and right in the face of this emergency has elected a Legislature with but one or two secession men in it; fewer than she has years.

It must be admitted that Douglas helped much to disarm us of our only resource by the anxiety which he declared at Norfolk. Va., to have the office of hangman under Lincoln, for the pleasure of administering to the bronchial affections of the Secessionists. His willingness to accept office under a Republican President, and such an office, has had a demoralizing effect on the South, and now there is considerable doubt whether the Postmasters and Customs-collectors in the South would throw up their commissions upon Lincoln's Inauguration, as but a little while ago it was supposed they would do. Indeed, so rapid is the decline in political virtue, that it is probable that all these will be found warm supporters of his

In Washington, also, the very capital of the nation, where we looked for peculiar have taken to Wide-awake parades, and Government officers are donning capes and torches so fast that the Republicans are beginning to fear that no changes will be required in the Departments, as all the clerks will be found to be old original Republicans, thoroughly impregnated with the smell of

What hope of frightening the timid conservatives of the North can we have when the South desert us in this way? How can we hope to persuade our people that the defeat of Lincoln is necessary to save the Union, when the South receive the prospect of it in such a way as would indicate that it was the very thing that was required to turn them all into Union-savers?

If this is the way the South back their friends, we might as well hang up our doleful harps; for our fearful songs of what the South will do in case of the election of Lincoln, and their contented and even jolly state elections, the South had thrown itself into its most tragical attitude, and had talked of the official guillotine, she will have none but to him as follows: berself to blame. Like Pilate, we wash our hands of the consequences.

Present Appearances.
Mr. Douglas has no strength of his own, either in the North or in the South. His friends do not expect him to carry any Southern State; and they edmit that except by joining forces with Bell-and probably not even then—he can get nothing in the Northern. Standing alone, the chances, as they appear at present, are that he can not command a single electors vote. His political value is simply that of a disturbing ele-ment. However unpleasant, in a party point of view, such a conclusion may be, it is one at which it is impossible not to arrive.

The friends of Mr. Breckinridge call upon Mr. Douglas to withdraw; but although they invoke him in the name of the Democracy, they have no hold upon him in that behalf. A Democracy with rival candidates for the Presidency is not such an unity as to give one section any claim upon the other. Of the two candidates -Mr. Douglas -if either -is the legitifinate; he has the party leave to stay if he wants to, and no mere opinion adverse to his success is a sufficient reason for his removal. If he withdraws, it should be in compliance with permission coming from a very different quarter.

Mr. Douglas would probably be quite willing to go out; but how can he? Party usage has as yet provided no regular means to annul the effect of a nomination; and to depart without leave would be taken as an act of desertion. In the most desperate straits, politicians and party journalists will imagine contingencies upon which to predicate calculations of auocess; and so long as this can be done the candidate has nothing to do but to stand, the forlorn representative of hopes in which he does not participate, Mr. Douglas is to be pitled. There is no romance in a struggle where hope has de-

South for him, all the North for Mr. Lincoln; the prospects of the latter for the whole of his section being better than those of the former for the whole of his. This can not make him President, nor, with a reasonable allowance of accidents in his favor, defeat a choice by the people. Mr. Breckinridge is, therefore even as he appears through his own organs, as dead practically, as Mr. Douglas, with this difference against him, that, whereas his timely with-guide in conjectures as to the future, the personal results of the Presidential canvass of 1860 will be the political burial of both these gentlemen. The leaders of factions always fall, sacrificed to the spirit of reconciliation; nor is there any reason to suppose that they will form exceptions to a rule so universal.

The Terpstehoreen Cleray.

The Prince's buff at New York demonstrates the prince's buff at New York demonstrates that the clergy man strated one thing; that is, that clergymen and Tract Society Directors, who publish tracts on the sin of dancing, can not manage a ball. We dislike to write any thing to disparage the clergy, and the impression made on our youthful mind by the tract which told of a young woman who attended a ball when she should have gone to a prayermeeting, and providentially took cold and died, shricking in the torments of a guilty conscience, is not yet effeced, therefore, we have a profound veneration for Directors of Tract Societies; therefore, it is with pain that we remark that clergymen and Tract Society Directors can not manage a ball. It is a lesson to clergymen not to undertake too much. It shows that a man may be very competent to lead the devotions and reprove the sins of the people, and yet not be fit to manage a ball. The lesson may be worth the cost, for future use, even if the Prince does go back with the idea that a trap was set to precipitate him into a chasm in the ball-room floor. In future let there be a division of sacred duties, as there was in Paul's time, when complaint was made that the widows were not properly cared for, and some were chosen to serve tables and widows. Let some be chosen to serve balls. thought necessary at any time, these twenty | and let the clergymen devote themselves to spiritual affairs. Then all things will work together for good.

In ancient times there was more versatility. David was accomplished in holy offices, while his dancing was a marvel of agillty and grace. But since the increase of mankind, and the great addition to the cares of Providence by the discovery of America inspiration is more economically dispensed. Men are "called" to particular professions; and it is demonstrated that they may be eminent clergymen, and may publish very powerful tracts against dancing: and yet not be fit to manage a ball.

Furthermore, it is probable that the openng of a frightful chasm in the floor at the New York ball, was intended to show the divine displeasure that clergymen and Tract Society Directors should assume duties for which they were so unfit. The ground opened and swallowed Korah, Dathan and Abiram, sympathy and assistance in our panic, they for undertaking something which they did not understand, and it was strictly according to the "unities" of Providence that the floor should open as it did at the ball, and swallow thirty or forty. Whether the clergymen and Tract Society Directors themselves were swallowed, is no indication of the purpose: Providence does not stop at such details. When David sinned in numbering Israel, it was Israel, not David, that was

Let the lesson be remembered. Let clergymen and Tract Society Directors concentrate all their energies on preaching and publishing tracts against the sin of dancing without themselves trying to exemplify it. Their failures have a tendency to damage their influence; for if the world finds out that they are unfit to manage a ball which they felt themselves "called" to undertake, it suspect that they have mistaken their may suspect that they call in other things.

A Delicate Subject.

It would be impossible to imagine that of mind as the prospect grows imminent, are any true Southerner could hold office under rather incongruous. If, upon the recent a Republican President. What! accept a pension from an enemy of the South! There was a Benedict Arnold, but surely none promiscuous alaughter, and of dying like | could be so base as this. There is only one the celebrated Kirby, we might have done | view of the case that would justify a Southsomething for the Union in the North. If erner in holding office under a Republican, a Republican President is inaugurated, and and that is, as a matter of private business, a Republican President is inaugurated, and and that is, as a matter of private business. the South shall have occasion to mourn, like The editor of the Avalanche is postmaster of have already been adjudicated. Ruchel, 40,000 of her children beheaded by Memphis. The editor of the Appeal appeals

"Do you believe that a Southern man can hold office under a Black Republican Administration without self-disgrace? and, if so, would you hold one yourself?"

In response, the Avalanche said: "The last interrogatory of the Appeal we regard as an unjustifiable effort to drag the private affairs of the senior editor of this paper into this discussion, and we will not dignify it with a reply."

Thus it will be seen that as a private affair a fire-eating editor may hold office under a Republican President, and it will be nobody's business. This removes much of the apprehension that has been entertained, that a Republican President could not carry on the Government, for want of men to hold the offices in the South.

Good but Slow. The New Yorkers undertook to impress the Prince with our immense military power. They paraded 6,000 of the citizen soldiery, and it took four hours to get them into column and march them from the Battery to the City Hall; and before they could all march past the Prince, it had become so dark that he had to retire, and the parade was cut short. Generalship which requires four hours to maneuver 6,000 men from line into column and march them a mile, will not seem very formidable to the Prince and the military men with him. General Sandford was very careful to inform the Prince that these soldiers followed daily employment. Probably the Prince thought that their General, at least, had better stick to it.

The Election of Lincoln Profitable to the

A Southern paper thus anticipates the good time coming from the election of Lincoin, and the consequent secession of the

"But let the Northern States attempt co reion—let them make war on the South—instead of loss, it may be great gain, to the merchants of the South. They have the goods of Northern merchants, and Northern In looking over the calculations of the friends of Mr. Breckinridge, his chances on the other hand, have any thing belonging to the South which she can keep, as a set off to the forfeiture of her claims on the South Not a thing. Our cotton, our suscept her the case, at the best, would only stand, all the off, to the forfeiture of her claims on the South? Not a thing. Our cotton, our sugar, our tubacco, have been paid for before they left the producers' hands. If they have them, they have paid for them. And if they want more of them, which they will, to keep their factoriess in operation, they must pay for them."

THERE is talk about a contract for supplying the City Prison with fresh meat, the bids for which, it is said, lie unopened in the Mayor's office, while extravagant rates are paid for current supplies. It is furthermore against him, that, whereas his timely withdrawal might have improved the prospects of Mr. Douglas, the withdrawal of Mr. Douglas can not now, nor could it any time, have placed him in a better position than be is at this moment.

If past party history may be taken as a paid for corrent supplies. It is furthermore reported that there was a good deal of apparent reluctance in high places to advartise for offers, as if some favorite of the powers that be was doing too well to render a change desirable. It is affirmed, also, that the rates paid for these provisions are quite a liberal margin higher than some of the bids, while the difference in the quality of the articles is the other way—a had state of affairs.

"strayes and facilities the section."

Perseverance Under Adversity The Enquirer thus shows that the case of the Democracy in Ohio is still hopeful: "It thus appears that within the last six years, notwill standing all adverse influences and discouragement, the Democracy have increased their vete from 100,000 to 183,000, which is certainly a large and healthy increase.

The last six years, is the era in which Mr. Douglas has laid out the policy of the Democratic party. We suppose that is what Democratic party. We suppose that is what is meant by "adverse influences and discouragements." Adverse influences is good.

"Virginia can no more prevent the disso-lution of this Union after Lincoln's election lution of this Union after Lincoln's election than she can prevent that election. She will be powerless to prevent civil war, with all its attendant horrors. Virginia will, by a majority of her people, decide upon resistance, while a large minority may desire to postpone resistance for the "overt act;" but, litched as she is to the Southern States, she itched as she is to the Southern States, she hitched as she is to the Southern States, she will be dragged into a common destiny with them, no matter what may be the desire of her people. PAINFUL DOMESTIC TRAGEDY IN NEW OR-LEANS—A Mon Killed in an Affray by his Step-son.—Wednesday's New Orleans Picremarks:

ayune remarks:

T. F. Wilson, a cotton-screwer, was killed by R. Swan, his step-son, last night. This sad affair arose from a family quarrel. Mrs. Wilson is the mother of five children by her first husband. She married the deceased wilson had been about eight months ago. Wilson had been a seafaring man, and was a strict disciplinarian, and somewhat rough and brutal in his manner, although an honest and well-mean-ing man. His treatment of his wife's younger children incensed the oldest and caused his frequent interference, and some weeks ago they had a quarrel; every day made the breach wider, and the family circle became intolerable. Vesterday morning the quarrel was renewed, and Wilson threatened the young man to kill him if he came back in the house.

Last evening, young Swan, who is learning the blacksmith's trade, came home after his day's work and went to his room. He was sitting on his bed, when his step-father learning that he had come, and caraged at this resistance to his orders, entered the room and, it is alleged, assaulted him brutally. The young man drawing a small single-barrel pistol from his pocket, discharged it at his step-father, the ball taking effect in the neck. Wilson, although wounded, renewed the attack, and young Swan then using a dirk, stabbed him eight wounded, renewed the attack, and young Swan then using a dirk, stabbed him eight or nine times, killing him on the spot. After the fatal deed was done, Swan went out of the house, and meeting a policeman, told him what had occurred, and surrendered himself.
